RATE OF EXCHANGE

If you are transferring money in INR and the company indicates that an amount of 0.50 INR will be added to the current conversion rate (xe+), here's how to interpret and calculate it: Understanding the Adjustment

1. Current Conversion Rate (xe+): -Find the current exchange rate for INR to AED. For example, let-s assume the current rate is 1 AED = 24.00 INR.

2. Adjustment of 0.50 INR: -The note suggests that an additional 0.50 INR will be added to the conversion rate. This means that the effective rate you will use for conversion will be adjusted to reflect this addition.

Calculation Example

Let's assume the current rate is 1 AED = 24.00 INR. 1. Calculate the Adjusted Rate: If an additional 0.50 INR is added to the conversion rate, the effective rate would be adjusted Rate = 24.00 + 0.50 = 24.50 INR per AED.

1. Convert INR to AED: Suppose you want to transfer 10,000 INR:

- With the adjusted rate of 24.00 INR per AED, the amount in AED would be
- Amount in AED = 10,000 INR / 24.50 INR per AED - 408 AED.

Steps to Follow

1. Check the Latest Rate: Obtain the most recent INR to AED exchange rate.
2. Apply the Adjustment: Add 0.50 INR to the current rate to get the effective rate.
3. Calculate the Amount: Use the adjusted rate to determine how much AED you will receive for your INR. By applying this adjustment, you ensure your account for the additional amount specified by the company.
